The Little Prince (2)

In the vastness of space and time,

A little prince with a heart so divine,

Fell to Earth, with a curious stride,

Searching for connection, a love to abide.

He met a pilot, stranded in the sand,

Shared stories of roses, and a distant land,

The prince spoke of love, of joy and of pain,

Of the beauty of friendship, and the love that remains.

His rose, a symbol of love so true,

Taught him of attachment, and the heart that's anew,

The little prince learned, as he journeyed with glee,

That love is a choice, and a gift to see.

In the stars up above, his heart still roams,

A beacon of love, that guides us back home,

To cherish the moments, the love that we share,

To never forget, the beauty that's rare.

The little prince's story, a reminder to us all,

To love without condition, to give without a fall,

For in the end, it's not the years that we live,

But the love that we give, and the memories we live...
